QUINN ASKS $25,000 DAMAGES FOR LIBEL

The Spectator Publishing Company, producer of a Terre Haute weekly news publication, is named defendant in a $25,000 damage suit filed yesterday in Vigo Circuit Court by Linville H. Quinn, secretary of the Terre Haute Retail Merchants Association.

Quinn seeks judgment for use of his name in a "libelous article" appearing in the Spectator on May 15.

Nora C. Williams, manager of the plant, and F. E. Hutchins, editor, are named co-defendants in the action in which the merchants association official brands as "false, untrue and unfounded," the Spectator's purported expose of a conspiracy in which Quinn was said to have hired men to assault Max Schafer and T. N. Taylor, local labor leaders.

Quinn charges "that as a result of said libelous article being so published the said plaintiff has been damaged in his reputation and standing in the city of Terre Haute" and that "he has been made to suffer humiliation, pain, and has been made nervous and sick."

The action was filed by Charles C. Whitlock and Charles E. White, attorneys for the merchants association. Preparation of the suit had been rumored here for several days.

A copy of the allegedly libelous article from the May 15 issue of the Spectator is made a part of the Circuit Court complaint.

TETANUS FATAL TO BOY

INDIANAPOLIS, May 28.—(AP)—Nine-year-old George W. Passwater, son of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Passwater, living near Nobleville, died today a victim of tetanus. The infection developed after the boy ran a splinter into his finger while playing two weeks ago.

The word caterpillar, translated literally, means "hairy cat."
